

Fantasy Round 3 Wrap Up

Despite all teams only having a 1 dayer this week, we saw some rather large individual scores this week as well as 3 teams scoring over 1000 points.

We start off with new E-grade VC Burra Reed amassing a huge 288 points even without getting the player of the round. Somehow 7 for, 40 runs, 2 catches and a hat trick aren't enough claim the all precious carton of beer. Christo decided to adopt the Hooch technique and give it to A-grader Keagan English instead who scored a seamless 110* to guide the A's to victory. Westpac boss Dick Hockney showed why he was next in line for the 'Invincibles' tour of '48 by scoring 93 runs in the first E grade victory of the season.

Drew 'Clown' Clayfield decided, during the game, to practice for his audition for the next Cirque du Soleil tour of duty by acrobatically catching a skied ball at long on from his position of regulation mid off. It was truly a sight to behold and definitely worth a trip to Las Vegas for the opening show.

Jack Dent disappointed all teams except for Dentless this week by bringing in only 35 points. Maybe he was a bit frazzled after being caught cheating in the noble past time of Movember by shaving all but his months-old Mo on the 1st day.

Cricketing extraordinaire W. Ide top scored for the C grade with 54 in an amazing display of line and length bowling....on the wrong pitch.

Huddo Hudson had a stroke of genius, deciding to go against the norm by not picking Dent and choosing Burra as captain. This move was rewarded with a round-topping 1256 points sky rocketing him to 2nd place overall.

The top-secret manager A. Nonymous, finished the round on top with a solid 1166 points adding to the rumours and hearsay about who this mysterious manager is. Sir Alex Ferguson? Maroon Stig? Batman? Time may tell.

QF747 Heitmann will be taking a long hard look in the mirror after decided to back himself in as his team's captain in exchange for Burra Reed.

A big shout out to the Wood-duck for an expert game of Yahtzee on Friday night, showing the game's founder Weed how it's really played. He then decided to back his efforts up by instructing the Weed to 'channel his inner Gavin Jones' late on Saturday night at the Hackney. A well-rounded display of dice and drinking.

Another shout out goes to SK Robbo for icily looking back at Rosey no less than 16 times while walking off the ground having just been fired for LBW. Rosey will certainly be looking forward to an intricate and detailed PowerPoint presentation seminar on how the ball would have had to defy the laws of Physics to have gone on to hit the stumps. Not wanting to be outdone, Robbo decided to 'channel his inner Bowie' by labeling the non-striker as unsportsman for getting in his way while attempting to field the ball off his own bowling, resulting in a single.

One piece of advice I'd like to leave you all with is to never underestimate the importance of asking for your subway well toasted when ordering for Ben Hook. A mistake I won't be making again too soon as it resulted in one of history's greatest dummy spits. Not even a fresh baked cookie could relieve that anger.

Please make sure to check your team's points carefully and let me know if there are any mistakes. Also, don't forget to get your tables together for what is sure to be another great Quiz Night on the 26th of November. Get your tables in to Evan Lucas asap to secure a spot, or just come on the night and hope to be on Clever's table.
